Acute Oncology

Pauline Leonard, Consultant Medical Oncologist, Whittington Hospital NHS Trust

Development of an acute oncology service which brings together expertise from oncology, emergency, medical and surgery disciplines to enhance management of patients with severe complications following chemotherapy or as a consequence of diagnosed or undiagnosed cancer.

Reducing Hospital admissions and QIPP – what this means for Cancer Reform Strategy

Stephen Williams, Macmillan Cancer Reform Implementation Manager.

Every day in hospital is a day wasted in the life of someone with cancer and from the NHS perspective the number of hospital beds will be reduced to save money, this is why we have to support people to stay at home as much as possible. This workshop looks at how the Cancer Reform Strategy and QIPP can be aligned to meet this win-win for patients and the NHS, but what are the implications to primary care?
