

Driving hard to change lives

£185

could provide emotional support to one person living with cancer for around eight weeks, through ongoing and regular support sessions with one of our Macmillan Buddies.

£270

could pay for a Macmillan Nurse for 1 day, helping people living with cancer and their families receive essential medical, practical, and emotional support.

£482

could support our Cancer Information and Support team to run our Macmillan Support Line phone service for 1 hour. In this time, they could deal with 24 calls and web enquiries from people who want questions answered, need practical or financial support.

£1,985

could support our Energy Advice Team to run the Energy Advice service of our phone service for 1 day. In this time, they could, on average, deal with 39 calls or web enquiries, providing advice on how people living with cancer can keep warm without the worry.

£8,270

could support our Work Support Team to run the work support element of our phone service for 1 week. In this time, they could, on average, deal with 153 calls or web enquiries, helping people affected by cancer receive advice and support on employment related issues.

MACMILLAN CANCER SUPPORT

How it helps

The Longest Day Golf Challenge is 'the people's major' of Macmillan fundraising challenge events. A great-cause golf marathon to raise money for people facing cancer.

Playing the Longest Day Golf Challenge and raising money for people with cancer can help thousands of people live their life better during their diagnosis journey. It can help people afford the cost of transport to their appointments, it can help them support their families while they are out of work, and it can keep them focused on their health journey instead of their financial pressures.

The Longest Day Golf Challenge is not just a game. It's much more important than that.

On average someone is diagnosed with cancer at least
every 90 seconds,
in the UK.

