

What's important to me

Your name

What is this document for?

You can use this document to help you prepare for the future. It gives you an opportunity to think about, talk about and make notes about your preferences and priorities for care at the end of your life.

You can use the notes you make in this document to help you record your wishes on your Advance Care Plan. Your health and social care professional will be able to give you an Advance Care Plan form.

If you don't want to use this document to make notes about your wishes, you don't have to.

Sometimes people wish to refuse specific medical treatments in advance. This document is not meant to be used for such legally binding refusals. If you decide that you want to refuse any medical treatments, it would be advisable to discuss this with your doctors.

What should I include in my What's important for me document?

You should include anything that's important to you or that you're worried about. It's a good idea to think about your beliefs and values, what you would and wouldn't like, and where you would like to be cared for at the end of your life.

Should I talk to other people about my What's important for me document?

You may find it helpful to talk about your future care with your family and friends, although sometimes this can be difficult, because it might be emotional or people might not agree. It can also be useful to talk about any particular needs your family or friends may have if they are going to be involved in caring for you. Your professional carers (such as your doctor, nurse or social worker) can help and support you and your family with this.

People who should be asked about your care if you're unable to make a decision for yourself
