

MACMILLAN AT WORK

Training. Support. Knowledge.

Right now, or some time soon, you are going to have to deal with cancer in the workplace. Macmillan's experience with people affected by cancer makes us ideally placed to help you. Our expertise is in workplace training, guidance and resources.

WE ARE MACMILLAN.
CANCER SUPPORT

By joining Macmillan at Work free today you'll benefit from:

Receiving The essential work and cancer toolkit which provides guidance and practical tips for you and your employees.

Access to free e-learning modules for line managers, occupational health professionals and union reps.

Regular updates and information about work and cancer and other long term health conditions by e-newsletter.

Opportunities to book one of our specialist work and cancer training and consultancy sessions.

Our training offers

1. Train the trainer

We can provide you with the materials and skills to establish a sustainable training model for your large workforce. We will train up groups of staff to upskill line managers to better support staff affected by cancer.

2. Consultancy support

This bespoke service can enable your organisation to develop best practice provision to support staff affected by cancer. This may include reviewing long-term sickness, bereavement and carers policies or advising on the support needs of your staff.

3. Bespoke sessions

To develop a bespoke programme, eg shorter sessions or a workshop with specialist content, get in touch for a quote that's specifically in line with your requirements.

We can also offer a free one-hour introductory session on work and cancer delivered by one of our volunteers.

4. Managing cancer in your workplace

Designed for HR professionals and/or line managers, this interactive workshop provides training in:

- Cancer treatment, its side effects and the impact on a person's work.
- The Equality Act and the Disability Discrimination Act.
- Talking about cancer.
- Supporting carers' needs.
- Making workplace adjustments.
- Managing bereavement and end of life.

This workshop includes real-life case studies and provides you with an organisation action plan. We can deliver the workshop to your employees in house or as an open workshop at locations UK-wide.
