When someone in the family has cancer, it can be incredibly upsetting for a young person. But when Amy Jane Clark, an inspiring 11-year-old from Glasgow, lost her grandfather to the disease, the experience motivated her to do something for Macmillan, Amy?

So, what did you do for Macmillan, Amy? Well, I’ve always liked art, so one day when I was at the shops with my dad, I asked him if I could get some face paints.

Did it give you a taste for doing fundraising? Yes, I’ve got lots of ideas for the future. At the moment I’m deciding whether to do a bike ride next or a very, very, very... hard work. We simply couldn’t do what we do without people like her. A huge thank you to Amy for all her hard work. We simply couldn’t do what we do without people like her. A huge thank you to Amy for all her hard work.

Meet and great

Use your morning as a chance to welcome new pupils, parents and staff at the start of the academic year. It’s bound to make the first week a little bit sweeter for everyone.

Wend science

Get pupils to investigate reversible and irreversible changes involved in cooking and sequencing steps. Not only is it educational, but it’s tasty too.

Make a song and dance of it

Want to give your school’s coffee morning to the next level? A talent competition will give everyone the chance to show off for a good cause over coffee!

The healthy option

Swap the cakes and sweets for healthy snacks such as fresh kebabs and dried fruit. It’s a great way of showing pupils that healthy eating can be fun. You’ll find a whole host of nutritious recipes at coffee.macmillan.org.uk/schools

What would you say to other people thinking about fundraising for Macmillan?

Go for it. I did, and I feel really happy that we can help more people with cancer, to turn more bad days into good ones. Someone who can answer your questions, whatever they may be. That’s where the Macmillan Support Line – 0808 808 00 00 – comes in.

The key question:

When you’re affected by cancer, you want to know there’s always someone you can turn to for support. Someone who can answer your questions, whatever they may be. That’s where the Macmillan Support Line – 0808 808 00 00 – comes in.

We’re there for young carers

Whether young or old, supporting carers is an important part of our work. Not only do we provide carers with practical and emotional support, information, financial help, and opportunities, but we also campaign on their behalf. That’s why we’re proud to be a partner in the upcoming Carers Week. Carers Week, which runs from 13 to 19 June, is organised by nine leading charities. Designed to celebrate the contribution made by the UK’s six million carers, the week will see bundles of events taking place nationwide which all aim to: • highlight the support and services that are available to carers • raise awareness of carers’ needs • campaign for better support and services for carers.

If you have a young carer in your class, please let them know about the information box below that’s available at cancertalk.org.uk

A big well done to the Year 10 ASDAN students at Farsta School, Birmingham, for organising a super-speedy fundraising event for Macmillan. The students held a cake sale and were given 15 minutes to raise as much money as possible. They didn’t hang around. Their final total weighed in at £5 per minute!
